The information appearing on this web site is of a general nature and does not constitute legal advice as to any viewer's specific situation. Legal advice and opinions are provided by the firm only upon engagement with respect to specific factual situations. Viewing the information on this website or contacting the firm by email or otherwise does not create an attorney-client relationship between you and this firm until such time as a formal engagement is undertaken by the firm.

You should not, therefore, send us any confidential information until after a formal engagement is entered into between you and us. You also should be aware that any communication sent to us by email, may be intercepted by third parties who may be under no obligation to keep such communication confidential. Before sending any confidential information you should contact us to arrange suitable means to protect such confidential information.

You should not rely on the information on this site in formulating or carrying out actions in your specific situation. Legal problems can be complicated and regardless of how similar to a fact pattern discussed on this website your situation may appear to be, other facts may render the principles described on this site inappropriate for your case. In addition, the information posted here may be out of date, incomplete or superseded by subsequent legislative or judicial action. You should formally engage legal counsel of your choice before taking actions with legal consequences.
